INTRODUCTION TO STUDY

This historical study of initiatives from the year 1912 through December 2002 offers a concise history of initiatives and the initiative process. The data is arranged several ways in order to accommodate various research perspectives and goals. This study provides: a) by year, the percentage by which ballot measures were approved by voters; b) by year, the number of initiatives that received title and summary, qualified, failed, or were from withdrawn from the process; and c) by subject matter, proposed initiative measures that received a title and summary each year.

Prior to 1960, initiative measures appeared on general election ballots only. Since that time, initiative measures have appeared on primary, general, and special election ballots. Ballot measures were not numbered until the general election of 1914. The chronologically ordered section of this study entitled "Initiatives by Title and Summary Year" notes the election in which each initiative appeared.

Please note that information from the California State Archives regarding some election years is limited; therefore, some measures may exclude election dates and the category of the initiative (i.e., constitutional amendment, statute, etc.). Also note that the title of an initiative as it appeared in circulation, and its title as it appeared on the ballot, may differ. This study refers to initiative titles as they appeared in circulation.

For clarification of abbreviations used in this study, please refer to the Legend on Page 15.

THE CALIFORNIA INITIATIVE

On October 10, 1911, by way of a special election called by Governor Hiram Johnson, the initiative process was established in California by a margin of 168,744 to 52,093 votes cast for Senate Constitutional Amendment (SCA) 22. South Dakota was the first state in the nation to establish the initiative process (1898). Utah, Oregon, Montana, Oklahoma, Missouri, Michigan, Arkansas, and Colorado followed thereafter, preceding California, respectively. The contents of the 1911 constitutional amendment, and all other issues relating to voting, initiatives, referendum and recall, can be found under Article II of the California Constitution.

Prior to 1911, citizens in California voted only on measures and acts that were placed on the ballot by the Legislature. The approval of the initiative process in 1911 provided two methods by which a citizen could place a measure on the ballot.

The first method, the direct initiative process, allows a citizen the option to bypass the Legislature and go straight to the public in an effort to place an issue of interest on the ballot for voter approval or rejection. The process adopted in 1911, which is still in use today, requires the proponent to obtain an official title and summary of the proposed initiative from the Attorney General. Upon obtaining a title and summary, the proponent of an initiative is permitted to circulate the petition for 150 days. During the course of the 150 days, the proponent must gather a requisite number of signatures of registered voters who support the initiative. If a citizen circulates an initiative petition with the intention to revise a California statute, the number of signatures gathered must equal 5% of all the votes cast for the office of Governor in the last gubernatorial election. If the initiative proposes an amendment to the California Constitution, the number of signatures gathered must equal 8% of all votes cast for the office of Governor in the last gubernatorial election. Once the proponent of an initiative gathers the requisite number of signatures during the 150-day circulation period, the petition must then enter and pass a random or a full signature verification process, or both, before it is finally placed on the ballot to be accepted or rejected by voters.

The second method, the indirect initiative process, allowed a citizen to appeal directly to the Legislature in order to place a measure on the ballot. However, in 1965, the Constitution Revision Commission recommended that the indirect initiative process be revoked due to its lack of use. In 1966, citizens approved Proposition 1A, which accordingly revoked the indirect initiative process. When in use, in order for an indirect initiative to be considered by the Legislature, the initiative petition had to be signed by a number of registered voters equal to 5% of all votes cast for the office of Governor at the last gubernatorial election. The signed petition was then submitted to the Secretary of State who subsequently transmitted the petition to the Legislature. The Legislature then had 40 days to enact or reject the initiative, or to amend it. In the event that the Legislature enacted the initiative as it was written, it became law. If the Legislature failed to enact, reject or amend the initiative within 40 days, the Secretary of State then placed it on the ballot for voter approval or rejection at the next election.

Unless the text of an initiative measure states otherwise, an approved initiative goes into effect the day after the election and is not subject to a Governor's veto, nor may it be amended or repealed by the Legislature without a vote of approval of the electors. Should two conflicting measures be approved by voters in a given election, the measure receiving the largest affirmative vote will prevail.

INITIATIVE SIGNATURE VERIFICATION PROCESS

Once the Attorney General has issued a title and summary, an initiative proponent has 150 days to circulate his or her petition within all counties of California.

At the end of the 150-day circulation period for an initiative, each petition section must be filed with the county elections office in the county where it was circulated. Only the signatures of voters who are registered in the county where the initiative petition was circulated are counted as valid. Each county has eight working days to conduct and report a raw count of signatures on the petition. If the amount of petition signatures accumulated in all counties does not reach the numeric threshold, the initiative fails.

If the number of signatures reported by each county reaches the requisite number of signatures, the Secretary of State directs each county to conduct a random sample of all gathered petition signatures.

Prior to 1976, the signature verification process consisted of a manual comparison between each signature on the initiative petition and the signature as it appeared on the individual's voter registration card. Currently, the process of signature verification is done by a computer generated random sample. For each county, a computer program produces a list of random numbers that correspond with the signature numbers on a petition. Within 30 working days, each county must check and verify a random sample of at least 500 or 3% of all petition signatures, whichever is greater, and report the number to the Secretary of State. If the projected validity of all randomly verified petition signatures is 110% of the original amount required, the initiative qualifies for the ballot without further verification. However, if the projected validity of signatures gathered falls between 95% and 110%, each signature must be individually verified. If the total falls below 95%, the initiative fails.

APPROVAL PERCENTAGES OF INITIATIVES VOTED INTO LAW

SUMMARY OF DATA

Between 1912 and December 2002:

- A Total of 1,187 initiatives were titled and summarized for circulation.
  - 1,168 direct initiatives
  - 19 indirect initiatives

- A Total of 824 initiatives failed to qualify for the ballot

- A Total of 290 initiatives qualified for the ballot.
  - 1 indirect initiative was adopted by the Legislature

  - Of the 290 which qualified, 99 initiatives were approved by the voters.
    - 32 approved were constitutional amendments
    - 57 approved were statute revisions
    - 6 approved were constitutional amendments and statutes

  - Total of 187 initiatives were rejected by the voters.

  - Total of 3 initiatives were removed from the ballot by court order.

- Total of 76 initiatives were withdrawn from circulation.
